Fashion snaps from news sites: a copyright fair dealing or infringement?

23 November 2011 - 5:53pm - Sarah Zeleznikow

In late September 2011, Kate Middleton, the Duchess of Cambridge, wore a Collette Dinnigan dress to the wedding of a close friend. Dinnigan, understandably keen to publicise this, had her press agency issue a media release which included photographs of the Duchess wearing the dress. The photographs belonged to Ikon Pictures, a London-based agency. A copyright fair dealing for the purpose of reporting the news, or copyright infringement? Read on... read more »

Personal Data Protection Act to be introduced next year

By LOH FOON FONG
foonfong@thestar.com.my

KUALA LUMPUR: The long awaited Personal Data Protection Act 2010 will be enforced next year.

Information, Communications and Culture Minister Datuk Seri Dr Rais Yatim said the Ministry was in the process of getting "the right personnel with the right expertise" to set up the Personal Data Protection Department.

The Act was gazetted into law in June last year.

Dr Rais said the Act, when enforced, would safeguard people's personal information from being abused by organisations that collect and process personal data of individuals.

He said this after the Get Malaysian Business Online (GMBO) launch Tuesday.
